STS ARE NOT GUILTY

York, Oct. 16.—After a trial lasting two weeks, five officers of the New York City Police Department Workers' union were not guilty of murder. Secretary Morris Sigman was one defendant. The case of two others did not go to the jury, as prosecution asked that these men be acquitted. The case against the complete collapse of an argument the garment workers' union.

During the employers' abrogation of this union and the union's refusal to sign by the arrest of seven active members. The union replied to these assaults proper manner. At one of the meetings, the union president Gompers gave this address: "The union's policy is to destroy unions by breaking up their contracts. We do not depend upon them to the fight for freedom we are not for war, but for peace. Any amount of ranks or on the meanest of the lives of the two of try."

But the unionists strengthen their case by pointing out the contradiction of a contract. This is subscribed to by the employers, to arbitrate the question, resulting in wage increases and employment by the arbiters that some of the workers may be discharged may be considered. The board expressed the following in the employers' theory that the workers have the right to run his business:

"Human being is wise enough to trust his sole judgment in that affect the welfare of the needs to be protected, and, to use the words of some against the errors to which he is in common with his kind, as against the inspirations of and selfishness. For this reason, he uses some authority, in case either of the parties covenant believes itself to be aggrieved."
